

Challenges:

Due to the nature of Lanes Group Limited's specialist services, transportation and the associated carbon impact will always be their biggest challenge. With 98% of their carbon emissions produced by transportation activities, the company has implemented a series of specific actions to minimize their environmental impact and work towards achieving their GHG emission reduction goals.

Impact:

The available carbon and fuel related resources have been useful in providing specialist insight into sustainable alternatives and continuous improvement.

Engagement events:

As Lanes Group Limited continues to move through their own net zero, sustainability, and ESG journey, the School's engagement events will continue to help benchmark their position on that journey, while also assisting them in deciding upon the content of their ESOS action plan.

Resources:

Assessments – The assessment process was simple but effective, allowing Lanes Group Limited to review their position and set realistic actions based on the findings.

Action Plan – This allowed Lanes Group Limited to focus on their goal and provided them with a clear path to achieve that goal.

E-learning modules - The resources and e-learning modules were great. They offered a huge range of topics in a variety of formats, suitable for all learning types and requirements. Given the extent of the information on offer, the modules were clearly designed to ensure that all information could be easily absorbed.

Value gained:

The School enables an understanding of client requirements, which in turn helps meet those needs and assists in the development of client-supplier relationships. Being a member of the School allows the company to improve its own sustainability position. By drawing from the wealth of information and resources available, including insights from the client's perspective, the company can drive performance-led outcomes.

Future proofing:

A number of the company's clients work with the School. Therefore, they will continue to educate through this route, meeting the necessary requirements of their clients while further supporting the development of their people.
